

GREEK FLAG AGAIN FLIES OVER FLEET

Country Entrusted With Control of Navy Under Venizelos Regime.
TO PATROL AEGEAN
Vessels Expected to Check
U-Boat Losses in Eastern Mediterranean.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press)

ATHENS, Sept. 20.—The Greek flag has again been raised over the Greek navy, Greek officers and crews are aboard, and the navy has resumed its independent status after a year of merger with the Entente fleets. This applies to the twenty-two warships of the light squadron, consisting of destroyers, gunboats and light cruisers, and also to the battleships, chief of which are the Lemnos and Kilkish, formerly the American battleships Idaho and Mississippi.

This change back to Greek control is one of the results of the recent Balkan conference at Paris, when the allied military and naval activities were confined to the Saloniki region, while the new Venizelos regime was strengthened by entrusting to it the military and naval control of lower Greece. The Entente troops were rapidly withdrawn from all these southern sections, and at the same time the Entente crews turned over the warships to their Greek commanders.

Last October former King Constantine's military and naval activities were considered by the Entente Allies as such a menace in the rear of their Saloniki expedition that allied control should be applied. On the light squadron there was a change of flags and crews, and the ships went to Saloniki, where they joined the allied squadron. The battleships Lemnos and Kilkish remained at the arsenal near here, but had some of the vital parts removed so as to render them incapable of doing any damage for the government then in control.

A crowd of several thousand Greek officers and their partisans gathered in front of the American Legation at the time, trying to have the American minister intervene, which he sternly refused to do as being entirely outside his duty. The American authorities are satisfied that this demonstration was planned by the then existing government for political effect, to create the impression that American sympathy was against the Entente Allies. It failed of that effect, and thereafter the delegations of agitators had to bear a request from the ministry of the foreign affairs before being received at the American legation.

Now that the navy is again in Greek hands, there is prospect that the light squadron may play a considerable role against the submarine activities in the eastern Mediterranean and the Aegean. It is said that more losses have occurred in this section than in any field of submarine activity, but chiefly in coasting vessels. The Greek naval patrol is very active, not only against the submarines, but in seeking out the many bases where they hid among the islands and take on their supplies of gasoline and food.

KEET BABY CASE UP MONDAY

102 Witnesses Will Testify in Trial of Kidnappers.

By Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 6.—When Claude J. Piersol, the 20-year-old in the nation's news. In the same leader of the band that is charged with kidnapping Lloyd Keet of Springfield, May 30, goes to trial in the Webster county court Monday, it will be the second time within seven years that the little hill town of Marshfield, twenty-five miles northeast of here, has figured more or less prominently in the sporting world eagerly followed the testimony in the trial of Walter Dibley, slayer of Stanley Ketchel, world's middleweight champion pugilist, who was convicted and is now serving a life term in the Missouri penitentiary.

It is rather coincidental that Judge C. H. Skinker, of Bolivar, Mo., who was on the bench in the Dibley trial, will preside at the trials of the persons accused in the kidnapping plots. Roscoe C. Patterson, a Springfield lawyer, who was special prosecutor in the Dibley case, will be special assistant prosecutor in the kidnapping cases. Both times he was employed by close friends of families of the murder victims.

In addition to Piersol, Taylor B. Adams and his son, Cletus, are charged with the stealing of the baby. Another accusation against them is alleged complicity in a plot to abduct C. A. Clement, a wealthy young jeweler of Springfield. Other defendants in the latter charge are Mrs. Allie Adams, wife of Taylor Adams, her son, Maxie, Dick Carter and Sam McGinnis. The trio connected with the Keet charges will go to trial first, according to an announcement by Paul M. O'Day, prosecuting attorney of Greene County.

The maximum penalty for kidnapping in Missouri is life imprisonment, the last legislature having abolished capital punishment for this crime. Conviction, however, of attempting to kidnap carries the same sentence as for the actual commission of the act. Although carefully guarding important features of the prosecution, Mr. O'Day has intimated that sensational testimony will be introduced at the trials. During the four months since the Keet infant was stolen, he has devoted practically all of his time to the preparation of the state's case. Subpoenas have been issued for 102 persons living in a dozen different cities, who will be used as witnesses.

One of the important efforts of the state will center upon the handwriting in the letters written to J. Holland Keet, father of the baby, demanding a ransom of $6,000 and giving instructions how the money should be delivered. Handwriting experts of St. Louis and Chicago will be used in the attempts to establish the authorship of the letters.

DRAMATIC CLUB WILL MEET

Plans to Stage Three Productions During School Year.

The Dramatic Club will hold a meeting at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night in Room 214, Academic Hall. A play for the first production this year will be chosen and a time set for the try-outs.

The plan for the year is to produce a light comedy, a serious play and a revival.

Last year the organization made enough money to furnish the Auditorium stage with a new curtain. It had planned the reconstruction of the Auditorium stage, but its funds were not enough to warrant it. This year the club intends to make sufficient money to do this.
